MALE CHORUS GIVES DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL FUNCTION

One of the most delightful evenings ever spent by the Male chorus of Monessen was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Davis of Delaware street last night. In addition to the regular rehearsal, a musical program featured the evening. Prof. George Bull rendered several enjoyable selections on the violin which was followed by other musical numbers.

About twenty five persons were present. The surprise of the evening was sprung by the refreshment committee of the chorus when the lunch was spread. The committee had prepared more than ample to quench the hunger of the inner man. Mrs. Davis, Mrs. W. O. Williams and Mrs. Fred Matson assisted in the serving, adding the delicate touches. The lunch was enjoyed by everybody.

The honors of the evening were won by Prof. Davidson of the public schools, A. E. Thomas, the banker and C. M. Ridenour.

At the conclusion of the program and when the repast had been partaken of, Jack Harvey, the enthusiastic and somewhat humorous member of the male chorus made a five minute speech, using much brillian oratory and indulging in pithy remarks thanking the host and hostess for the pleasant time spent.

This is the second social evening to be spent at the Davis home within the past few weeks. The marriage anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Davis was the occasion for a wholesale surprise. Those who planned the surprise were handicapped to some extent as they were unable to announce the number of years the couple have been married. as Mr. Davis is somewhat hyper-sensative about his age, but it was concluded that the number of years is something less than sixty and that the time had very little to do with the spirit of the occasion.

In order to prevent any mixup among the Davises and Davies—for there are as many of them in town as Jones and Smiths—it might be necessary to add that the above refers to Mr. A. W. Davis who pays the men off at the Page mill.

Career Ended

Financially unable to pay the borough license, dejected because Burgess Dunlap contemplates a dog crusade, and spiteful because the editor of this paper wrote an article on Fantine and Tige, we are sorry to report the sudden demise of either a Fantine or a Tige. The writer would not have cared, very likely, had the death been as most deaths are, surrounded by immediate comforts and home friends. But this dog for some reason, and Borough Clerk Pittman verily believes because of spite toward the editor, crawled in the edifor's back yard, even under the back porch and died. The death was not officially reported as other deaths are, but the matter was left to the elements of the weather and the report was made this afternoon when the thermometer registered 80 in the shade.

Now Mr. Pittman declares there is a technicality involved as to who becomes responsible for the removal of the deceased to a permanent city of silent repose. He agrees that the editor has no right to remove the deceased at his own expense and has some scrupies as to whether the borough has a legal right to summon the garbage collector., However, with all the promptness usually accorded this official in the discharge of the duties of his high office, Mr. Pittman did summon the garbage man and as he put it "the dead must be buried regardless of where the money comes from."

Thus ends the career of one of the town's unlicensed canines. She, he or it silently reposes on that far out dump from which no dog has ever returned.

TWO VIOLATORS IN BURGESS' COURT

Charles Metcalf was the first prisoner to face the burgess this morning. Mr. Metcalf is a printer by trade and wandered here from Thornville, O., presumably to get work. But instead of hunting for work in the proper places, he went into all the bar rooms in town and sampled their wares. He also stopped several citizens on the street asking for money to buy drink. He seemed to be pretty successful as when he was picked up by the police, he was so badly under the influence that he could not walk. He plead for leniency, promising to get out of town in ten minutes if he was granted his freedom. The burgess said that he would take a chance so Mr. Metcalf was granted his freedom.

The next prisoner was Mike Suter of Fourteenth street. He was arrested on information of his mother. It seems that the lad will not work and instead of trying to get work, he will stay out at night, and then come home in the morning and fight with his mother. He was given a choice to pay a fine of $5.00 and costs or $7.00 or work five days on the street. He took the latter, as his mother refused to pay his fine.

EUCHRE AND DANCE

The euchre and dance held by the Lyceum of St. Leonard's church at Turner hall last evening was a decided success. This is the first of a series of dances which will be given by the Lyceum.. The hall was crowded Music was furnished by the Reiner orchestra. A number of young people from Monongahela, Charleroi, Fayette City and Donora were in attendance.

CHIEF WHEATLEY GETS TWO MEN WANTED FOR CRIME

Chief John Wheatley yesterday received a message from the chief of police at Youngstown to the effect that Pete and John Helen believed to be in Monessen are wanted in Youngstown. Chief Wheatley at once went about to find the men and had little difficulty in locating them. After arresting and confining them in the borough lockup, a telegram was sent to the Youngstown officers and they are expected here some tome today.

The men it seems were mixed up in a fight about nine months ago and one man is said to have lost an eye. Who is responsible is to be judged at a trial that will follow. Both the men had secured work here and had to give up their jobs and go to answer the charge against them.

Tomorrow at the Olympic theatre, William Fox's great production of "The Celebrated Scandal" with Betty Nansen, the actress who speaks with her eyes. Miss Nansen is a royal actress, the admiration of European rulers, decorated by medals of honor from all rulers, acting with Jose Echecary, the Spanish Shakespeare, the admiration of all the world. She appears in her first play in America.

ATTENDED ALVIN THEATRE

The sewing club of the Hebrew Ladies Aid attended the performance at the Alvin theatre, Pittsburgh, this afternoon. The following ladies were present: Mrs. Joseph Samuels, Mrs. A. Nayhouse, Mrs. Max Janavitz, Mrs. A. Tanzer, Mrs. M. Miller, Mrs. M. Shapiro, Mrs. H. J. Lebowitz and Mrs. M. Rozner.

Enjoyable Affair

A full house enjoyed the concert recital by the Wyatt Concert company at the Baptist church last evening. The program was well arranged and exceptionally well rendered. Mr. Wyatt sang the familiar poem of Longfellow's, "The Windmill" set to music by Nelson with an appreciation so true and sympathetic that his hearers were charmed. In his Schuman numbers, particularly Die Beiden Grenadier, his voice with its dramttic possibilities, was heard at its best. Mr. Wyatt is an artist of experience in opera and concert.

Mrs. Wyatt read "The Rhyme of the Duchess May" by Mrs. Browning. "Perfection" was the exclamation heard throughout the audience when the poem was finished. In all her readings Mrs. Wyatt is passionately true, giving as much pleasure through her sketches of child life as through her heavier selections.

Mr. Tomlinson, the pianist of the company, rendered several brilliant numbers. His execution was unusually good in "Valse Caprice" by Strelezke.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR RALLY BEGINS TONIGHT

The Christian Endeavor Rally being held at the United Brethren church on Reed avenue opens tonight with a good programme. A good song service, vocal and instrumental solos, and good speaking are assured. The speakers for the evening are Mrs. Dubar, Mr. Edgar Knight and Mr. A. W. Ferren who will make the closing address.

Owing to the rush of business at Harisburgh at the present time, Mr. Miller will not be able to attend, but his place on the programms for Sunday night has been filled by substituting Mr. Lewis H. Rush of Dawson Pa. Mr. Rush is a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, Ill. He is also a singer of note and will sing at both the morning and evening services on Sunday.

—Willis Briggs has accepted a position at the Colonial pool and billiard parlors and has entered upon his duties. Mr. Briggs is widely known in the field of sport throughout the valley and his presence at the Colonial will incline to make tha popular place even more popular. 1t

Fruits of Fraud

The Terre Haute election fraud trials are at an end, and the country breathes a sigh of relief. The sentences imposed by Judge Anderson were unusually severe, but well merited, for the crimes were heinous and their commitment marked by utter depravity.

To the general public the whole affair will soon be but a memory, but it is to be hoped that the swift punishment meted out to the Terre Haute crowd will have a salutary effect in deterring would-be corruptors of the ballot everywhere. The most significant thing about the Terra Haute trials was that the conviction of the accused men became a foregone conclusion from the moment the state rested its case, thus showing how thoroughly public sentiment had been aroused.

May the spectre of Mayor Roberts, Judge Redman and other "higher-ups" arrayed in prison stripes, confront all future traffickers in votes, and may this trial mark an epoch in our country's electoral history. An ugly chapter is finished; let's paste down the leaves.

But before doing so, it is well to voice a word of deepest sympathy for the innocent wives and children left heart stricken and covered with shame and sorrow, alone at home.

Another Stage Set

The stage is set in Washington for yet another playlet which gives promise of being vastly entertaining, if not edifying.

We witness the unusual spectacle of a private banking institution praying an injunction, from a district court, against the secretary of the treasury of the currency. which in effect charges a conspiracy on their part to wreck the aforesaid bank. This is either a colossal bluff on the part of the bank, or Secretary McAdoo and Controller Williams have planted their official feet on an awfully slippery spot. But the sophisticated public, having in mind the many object lessons recently presented of the arrogance of would-be financial despots, will very cannily wait until the evidence is all in before shying any bricks at the aforementioned department heads.

In fact, they are largely inclined to the general attitude of the Missourian.

The Sante Fe railroad has become a great system, and largely because its management injects the human element that makes the world kin into the conduct of its affairs.

In Texas a freight conductor was out on his run, when the word was flashed that his wife was dying. Simultaneously came an order from headquarters to detach the engine and caboose and "run special" to the city where she was. Right of way was given the special over all trains. The conductor reached his wife's side in time to see her alive once again.

Don't you think that kind of "business" pays?

Huerta announces that Madero's assassination is a "professional secret," which he cannot divulge. There wasn't much professional secrecy about the promptness with which Victoriano hopped into Madero's chair, however.

We dont know whether a military organization can beat trained citizenry or not, but if it ever comes to a bayonet charge, we'd back 1,000 fellows who have pitched hay in the field against all the military science in the world.

Judging from the surprise evidenced because Roosevelt and Taft shook hands at a funeral, they evidently were expected to start a fight and kick over the coffin.

EUGENICS PROBLEM HAS BEEN SOLVED

St. Louis, Mo., April 29—The Italians in New York have solved the problem of eugenic marriages in a tactful, effective way, according to a letter received from Father Curry of St. James Parish, New York. According to Father Curry, the Italian mother and father usually ask the young man who seeks the hand of their daughter whether he is insured. If he is not insured, they urge him to take out insurance before the wedding and sometimes they insist upon it. That this relieves embarrassments is the opinion of the New York clergyman. The "bridegroom's policy" is health.

TWO YEARS TOMORROW SINCE FRANKS ARREST

Atlanta, Ga., April 28—It is just two years ago tomorrow that Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, was arrested and locked up. During these two years his case has attracted attention far and wide, and has been taken to the highest court in the country. The young man has gained many friends who are working for a new trial under more favorable circumstances than that in which he was found guilty. The decision of the United States Supreme court that Frank had had a fair trial, and that all of his constitutional rights had been protected, puts the unusual case up to the governor of the state. Governor Slaton will probably postpone final action on the pardon appeal until his successor comes into office next June.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE!

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are the successful substitute for calomel—there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad digestion or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil, you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

Go Where the Crowd Goes

When Billy Sunday Came to Town

By ALEXANDER CORKEY

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Reginald Nelson, a young Englishman of high birth, comes to this country to win fame and fortune. On the steamer he meets Albert Townley, a minister, Mrs. Graham and her pretty daughter, Joy.

Reginald goes to Bronson, home of his three new acquaintances, where he learns that Joy's father is a leading lawyer, who is the mainstay of a corrupt political ring. He gets a job.

The young Englishman enters the social life of Bronson. He falls in love with Joy, and later discovers that she is engaged to be married to Roland Gregory.

Allan Rutledge, another minister, and the Rev. Mr. Townley confer on the evil moral and laboring conditions in Bronson. The reform element meets and decides to have Billy Sunday, the noted evangelist, aid in a "cleanup."

Editor Marchmount offers Reginald a position on his paper. The latter accepts, and later he performs a heroic act in stopping a dangerous runaway.

Nelson starts on his work on the Courier. He begins to investigate the suspicious death of Mae Mobray, a youthful worker in Roland Gregory's factory plant. The councilmen and saloon keepers oppose the coming of Billy Sunday.

A tabernacle is built for Billy Sunday, and Reginald, in the columns of the Courier, begins a spirited campaign in favor of the evangelist. Sunday holds his first meeting in Bronson.

Much to the anger of Mr. Graham and Bud McCrea, a councilman, Sunday's work proves effective as an attack on vice. "By the help of God we'll clean up Bronson," says Sunday.

On a Sunday afternoon the reformer makes a powerful attack on gambling and saloons and hypocrisy. He describes saloons as "breeders of lawlessness."

Men finally begin to "hit the sawdust trail" leading to Billy's pulpit by the score and kneel in repentance of their sins.

"Certainly," said Allan Rutledge quickly; "we are only beginning. Before very long I am going to propose a new plan of campaign that will astound the enemy in Bronson more than the tabernacle meetings."

The day following the excursion of the Bronson lay gospelers to Augsley Joy Graham and Mrs. Rutledge visited the lonely mother of the hapless Mae Mobray. It was a pleasant March day, and they took with them little Anna and Abraham.

"It will do the poor woman good to see the children," said Mrs. Rutledge. They found Mrs. Mobray alone in her desolate little home. The childless widow was roused somewhat from her melancholy by the appearance of the two young women and especially by the sunshine of the children's presence. Charles Dickens was a lover of children, and it was he who wrote these touching words in regard to their influence:

They are idols of hearts and of households;
They are angels of God in disguise;
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses,
His glory still gleams in their eyes
Oh, those truants from home and from heaven,
They make me more manly and mild,
And I know now how Jesus can liken
The kingdom of God to a child.

"We are going to set apart a room in the church where tired mothers can leave their babies when they come to the services, and Dr. Rutledge thought that Mrs. Mobray would be just the one to take charge of it."

The eyes of the woman brightened as she listened.

"I had not heard of that," she said quickly. "I would just love to do work like that, and then I would feel that I was worth something, after all. It has been very dark to me since Mae"— Here the unfortunate mother found relief in tears, being unable to say more.

When the paroxysm of grief was over Mrs. Mobray dried her eyes and spoke brokenly. "I know it is wrong for me to nurse my sorrow as I do, but I have been so crushed. If it had not been for Dr. Rutledge I should have gone mad and died long before this."

When Mrs. Mobray began to weep Joy Graham had taken little Anna out of the widow's arms and had led Abraham into an adjoining room, so that the minister's wife and Mrs. Mobray were left alone.

"The world will grow brighter to you after awhile," said Mrs. Rutledge. "Do not despair. There is much to live for, you know."

"Who is the young lady, Miss Graham, who is with you?" asked Mrs. Mobray.

"Don't you know Joy Graham?" said the other, in surprise. "She often sings at the church. She is engaged to be married to Mr. Gregory."

"I thought I had seen her before," said the woman. "But, you know, I have not been able to get out to church for a long time. I only was able to attend a very few of the tabernacle meetings. Did you say that she is engaged to be married?"

"Yes," responded Mrs. Rutledge in a low voice. "She and Mr. Roland Gregory are to be married in the fall."

"Do you mean the Mr. Gregory who owns the factory where Mae worked?"

"Yes," responded Mrs. Rutledge.

"I don't think he's a good man," said the mother, her tears coming back. "Mae used to tell me of the kind of place the factory was when she first went there. She didn't complain about it after their big strike, but I am afraid the poor girl allowed the influence of the place to spoil her."

The poor mother seemed glad to relieve her soul by telling in detail all that she knew in regard to her daughter. "I wanted to tell all this to some one," she said as she finished, "but it is a terrible thing for me to speak of these things unless to some one like you.

"Here is the ring Mae had on her finger," said the woman tearfully handing a beautiful marriage ring to Mrs. Rutledge. "I did not say anything about this to any one before, as I thought I would let the poor girl's secret die with her, but something tells me I ought to tell the whole truth."

"You will feel better after this confession," said Mrs. Rutledge sympathetically. "I will give this ring to Dr. Rutledge. It will help solve the tragedy and may prevent another. There are some men in our modern American life, often in honored positions, whose private lives are unspeakable."

"What did she talk to you about for so long when you were together?" asked Joy later, moved by a not unnatural curiosity.

"She was telling me some more of the details connected with the sad fate of her daughter. I cannot tell you about it now, but some time I will. Dr. Rutledge asked me to find out."

That evening Mrs. Rutledge told her husband Mrs. Mobray's story in full and also gave him the ring which the woman had given her.

"I thought there was more that she knew," said Allan Rutledge seriously when his wife had finished. "I have some dark suspicions already, but I will not allow them to influence me until I get proof. If Mae Mobray was murdered there must be something done. Justice must not become a byword in Bronson just because the victim happens to be a poor girl."

"I was telling Mrs. Mobray about your plan to make her official baby tender at the church," said the wife a little later, "and she seemed delighted with the prospects. We must arouse the woman and get her interested in some kind of work. Her condition was pitiable when I called today, but I think Joy and I did her some good."

"What a treasure of a girl Joy Graham is!" said Dr. Rutledge enthusiastically. "But I can't bear the thought of her marrying Roland Gregory."

"She spoke to me this afternoon about Roland. She thinks it is part of her duty to win him to the better life."

"I never believed in this business of marrying men to reform them. It never worked yet, and it never will. It only means broken hearts and two wrecked lives instead of one." The minister spoke earnestly and added, "I am going to preach soon from the text 'Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers,' and I shall say some pertinent things on this very subject."

"Your sermon will be too late to help Joy," said the wife, shaking her head. "She has already plighted her troth to Roland, and she feels that she is already bound to him. She spoke to me a little about it today."

Dr. Rutledge looked grave, and the conversation was interrupted by the entrance of little Abraham in his pajamas to say good night. The mother left the room with her son, and Allan Rutledge sat alone with his thoughts.

In his hand he still held the ring which Mrs. Mobray had given to his wife. He looked at the gold band for a moment and then said to himself: "Pledge of falsehood and token of cruelty, you represent to me all that is lowest and vilest in the soul of a man. Speak, guilty ring, and tell me your fatal secret."

The ring lay, shining and beautiful, in the palm of his hand.

"No," he continued, speaking aloud, "beautiful ring of gold, thou art innocent. Alas, how the most sacred things are trampled under foot by swinish men."

He examined the ring closely and noticed a little number stamped on the inside, along with a special trademark.

"I can get this ring identified," he said to himself quickly as he looked at the distinguishing mark on the ring. "I shall send it tomorrow to a detective agency in Chicago. This ring will tell its secret, and if there is blood on it the murder will out."

He put the ring carefully in a drawer in his desk expecting to send it to Chicago the following day, but that very night he had a visitor who drove all thought of the ring out of his mind.

Soon after Allan Rutledge deposited the fatal ring in the drawer his doorbell rang. He arose and went to the door himself and was somewhat surprised to see Reginald Nelson standing there.

OPTION DEFEAT NOT SURPRISING

Result in House Was Expected From Start.

GOVERNOR TO KEEP UP FIGHT

Not Discouraged and Already Making Plans For Two Years Hence—He Was Handicapped by Character of Certain Men Who Supported Issue Through Selfish Motives.

Harrisburg, April 27.—Men who believe in local option declare that the result last week in the house, when the Williams bill met defeat by a vote of 78 for and 128 against, is not going to discourage those who want such a law on the Pennsylvania statute books. Already plans are being made for the 1917 battle, and it is expected to be one of the most strenuous in the long history of Pennsylvania politics.

The wets, though jubilant over the victory against their enemy, nevertheless feel that they must be vigilant and already they have outlined a program to fight the dry element in every legislative district of the state.

REP. CHARLES J. RONEY.
This Philadelphia Member is the Best Orator in the Legislature.

Governor Brumbaugh does not feel discouraged at the outcome of the uphill fight he made for local option. In the beginning he counted on securing at least 108 votes, and that the number fell far short of this is naturally disappointing to him. But it will not have the effect of causing him to relax his efforts for the struggle two years heace.

As already stated in these columns, local option never had a chance of passing. A majority of the members of the house were elected to represent the wet interests, and to imagine for a moment that a minority could win over a majority was to imagine something that does not often happen and could not happen under the circumstances existing this year.

To make the situation even more difficult for the governor's plans, a number of scheming politicians, who for years have been trying to destroy the Republican party, decided to lead the local option procession in order that in the event of the bill passing they would gain some of the glory that rightfully belonged to the governor. The caliber of these men and their reputation as political tricksters tended to keep out of the local option camp many who might otherwise have gone into it.

Hundreds of genuine Republicans had no desire to join hands with men who last fall characterized Governor Brumbaugh as insincere, who distributed slanderous literature concerning the entire Republican ticket and who took the lead for local option merely for selfish and scheming purposes. If these fellows had kept out of the fight the governor in all probability would have made a better showing.

There will be no increase in the state constabulary. By a vote of 61 to 165 the Baldwin bill to add 116 men to the present force, with an increase in salary for the members, met defeat in the house. Preceding the taking of the vote there was an acrimonious debate, in which the constabulary was praised and denounced. Representative Maurer, the only Socialist in the house, led the battle against the bill.

Representative Baldwin defended the constabulary, told of the fine work it is doing and said that every year it is unable to handle one-tenth of the requests made upon it. He said that Major Groome is not a Philadelphia liquor dealer, as alleged by Representative Maurer, but merely connected with a wine selling firm, one of the oldest in the Quaker City.

Representative Phillips, of Clearfield, said that the constabulary found the lost daughter of one of his constituents, who everybody believed to be in the hands of white slavers. Following a pathetic recital of the bringing home of this wandering girl by a trooper and the overjoyed family thanking him from the bottom of their hearts, Sullivan, of Allegheny, startled the house by jumping up and asking the members to vote against "this damnable state constabulary." Then Roonet, of Philadelphia, blew out all the proponents of the bill and the bill itself by characterizing the constabulary as nothing more than something patterned after "the Irish police that for untold centuries have been crushing the patrios of the lit-

GRANT DAY DINNER NOTABLES SPEECHES

SENATOR BOIES PENROSE

There is always a class in the United States or in any other country to whom doctrines of insurgency appeal. In one generation it takes the form of free silver; in another it is the greenback movement. Then it is succeeded by middle-of-the-road pupulism.

It may be that these agitations promote discussion of conditions and tend to ameliorate them. In the long run public opinion, after it once has found the truefacts, is seldom mistaken. The muck-raker may have his brief period of public attention, but in the end the sterling qualities of men and things will be appreciated. We want facts instead of theories and deliberation instead of hysteria.

After a period of unrivaled and extraordinary prosperity and development during the 18 years of Republican administration under three presidents, the American people came to want a change. Evils in the body, politic, social and industrial, were misrepresented, exaggerated or invented. The rising generation had forgotten all about the experiments with free trade under the Wilson-Gorman bill and the misery endured under Cleveland's second administration. Owing to an unfortunate division in the Republican party, which is now happily passing away, the Democratic party was successful in the last presidential election.

The people have had the change, they have had a brief experience with the Underwood free trade tariff policy. They have felt the humiliation of the policy of watchful waiting. They have seen business paralyzed by hostile legislation of congress, and now they are waiting for the coming opportunity in 1916 to register their verdict by an overwhelming majority in favor of Republican policies and a restoration of protection and prosperity and common sense in legislation.

I have not opportunity at this time to refer to the steadily increasing depression in industry and business circles since the advent of the Wilson administration and the enactment of the Underwood tariff law. I do not want always to be a bearer of a tale of woe and am not anxious to acquire the reputation of being a calamity howler. The conditions have, however, been apparent to all men, especially in Western Pennsylvania, and the evidence abounds so on every side that it is harly necessary for me to quote statistics or figures.

I make this statement, however, without fear of contradiction, that never has the business structure or the commercial and financial system of any nation received the destructive blows through governmental agencies that have been endured in the United States in the last few years.

LIEUT. GOV. REYNOLDS

It is with great reluctance that I take a position at variance with my chief, the governor, in regard to proposed industrial legislation, animated as the Governor is by thoroughly conscientious motives, possessing as he does high ideals, sterling integrity and absolute sincerity of purpose.

In common, however, with many others, I must refuse to credit him with omniscience; I must refuse to subscribe to an "absolutism" which decrees that a "personal program" in legislation shall have an "i" dotted or a "t" crossed by the members of that branch of government to whom the Constitution allots the sole, exclusive privilege of legislating. I must refuse to abdicate my right to think. I must refuse to agree that the manufacturers and producers of Pennsylvania, the men who make "the wheels go round," the men who furnish employment and stake their all in the hazards of competitive enterprise, shall be put in the same category (and the penal clause of the pending child labor bill places them in that category) as burglars, bank breakers and barn burners, and I further refuse to agree that a life spent in the school room better qualifies a man to pass on matters of industrial welfare or social welfare in relation to industrial affairs than does the experience gained in a life of mixup in the "pell mell" of business or a life spent in the production of comfort-making, value-creating commodities.

It seems to me that as Republicans instead of enacting "industrial" legislation in a form that will put more "brakes" on business, our efforts should be to take off "brakes" whenever the same can be done with safety and get on more "steam" so that instead of hauling "empties" we can make "full crews" necessary.

We must keep in mind that in times like the present, demagogues are always to be found ready to feed the vanity of the people, arouse passions, array classes and play on prejudices. Therefore, enthusiasm should be tempered with caution; sanity, not hysteria should be "the lamp to our feet," otherwise well—I appreciate that political prophecy is a barren intellectual recreation, but, there is an old homely saying that seldom misses "fire" that I call to your attention in this connection "Chickens come home to roost."

A notable circumstance in connection with the political make-up of the present General Assembly is the small representation furnished by that once pretentious political organization, named by its chief as "Gideon's Band." Of that militant hose which in 1912 "stood at the Armageddon," marshalled under "the flaming sword" of our "lost leader, the Colonel," but one sits in the upper branch of Pennsylvania's law making body, one "sole survivor" of that clamorous army, which fact is but another illustration of the wisdom of Lincoln's saying: "You can fool some of the people all of the time; all of the people some of the time; but you can't fool all of the people all of the time." It illustrates that.

Two Will Hang Friday for Murder

Sacramento, Cal., April 28.—David Fountain, convicted of the murder of Margaret Milling in the February term of court has been sentenced to hang Friday at Folson prison. His victim was a young girl and circumstances were pathetic.

Springfield, Ill., April 28—John Kinzie of Morris, Ill., is under sentence of hanging Friday at the Grundy county jail. Kinzie was convicted of the murder last November of Mrs. Mary Pobinlinski. His execution was fixed for Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday, but Gov. Dunne granted him a reprieve until April 30.
